

Chris Regan Becomes Chair of Professional Audio Manufacturers Alliance (PAMA) Board of Directors

Regan succeeds Greg Beebe as he begins his two-year term

The Professional Audio Manufacturers Alliance (PAMA) announces that Chris Regan has become Chair of PAMA's Board of Directors for a two-year term. Selected by the PAMA Directors as Chair-Elect in 2018, Regan succeeds Greg Beebe (Sennheiser) as Chair. Beebe remains on the PAMA Board as a Director, and Karam Kaul (Harman) has succeeded Regan as Chair-Elect.

Regan is a 15-year veteran audio professional whose resume includes serving on the founding team at Crowley and Tripp Microphones as Product Manager; as VP of Sales and Operations, North America for Audio Processing Technology; and his current position as Co-Founder and President of PAMA member company RF Venue, an innovative and fast-growing developer and manufacturer of patented antenna and RF communications products for wireless microphones and in-ear monitor systems. Regan holds two U.S. patents and received his MBA from Babson College.

“PAMA has made significant progress in recent years towards our common purpose of promoting high-quality professional audio,” said Beebe. “Chris has proven skills and a devotion to PAMA’s mission that have played a major role in that progress.”

“As a PAMA Board member and Chair-Elect,” Regan shares, “I have witnessed the great value of cooperation and dialog between often competitive companies that share a commitment and a progressive vision of fostering a stronger industry. While challenged by the high standard of leadership set by Greg Beebe, I am honored to now lead the Board as we continue to grow the organization and extend its positive impact.”
