Audio Developer Conference (ADC) 2025

The Audio Developer Conference (ADC) is back in Bristol, UK for its 10th annual iteration, celebrating the world of audio technology. The in-person and online hybrid conference will take place 10-12 November 2025. ADC invites anyone from the audio developer community – from students to industry experts – to attend and contribute to the conference.

ADC is an annual event celebrating all audio development technologies, from music applications and game audio to audio processing and embedded systems. ADC's mission is to help attendees acquire and develop new skills, and build a network that will support their career development. It is also aimed at showcasing academic research and facilitating collaborations between research and industry.

The Audio Developer Conference is now a full 3-day conference. The first day includes a full day of short 18-minute talks, plus a range of interactive workshops available to all attendees (subject to availability). The in-person and online hybrid conference will take place 10-12 November 2025 at the Delta Hotels by Marriott Bristol City Center.
