

New Rhodes Music 61-Key Stage Piano

Rhodes Music, a musical instrument manufacturer, will showcase its flagship MK8 pianos with newly integrated MIDI capabilities, along with its full collection of software instruments and effects, and introduce a new 61-key stage piano at The 2025 NAMM Show. The event will also mark the debut of the Rhodes Custom Shop, offering one-of-a-kind aesthetic customization for the MK8 with completely unique finishes. Held at the Anaheim Convention Center in California from January 23 to January 25, Rhodes invites attendees to Booth 10910 for an exclusive look at the brand's latest innovations and a chance to experience the timeless craftsmanship that defines Rhodes.

Since its revival as a UK-based company in 2021, Rhodes Music has reimagined the legendary electromechanical piano for today's musicians while honoring Harold Rhodes' original vision. Played at venues like Soho House in London and the Blue Note in New York City by artists such as Robert Glasper and Bill Laurance, the MK8 continues to inspire creators worldwide.

This year, the MK8 takes a significant leap forward with its newly integrated MIDI capabilities. Featuring proprietary sensing technology, the system ensures seamless expression with high-resolution monitoring of key position and both Channel and Polyphonic Aftertouch. These innovations enable players to achieve unparalleled control and dynamic range, whether performing on stage or composing in the studio. At the 2025 NAMM Show, attendees will have the opportunity to experience this enhanced functionality firsthand, demonstrating how the MK8 blends tradition with cutting-edge technology.

At NAMM, Rhodes will give attendees a first look at its upcoming 61-key stage piano - bringing the brand's iconic sound to a compact, portable design tailored for performers who demand both quality and versatility. Additionally, attendees will
