

Soundmit returns to Turin

After a one-year break, Soundmit – the international event dedicated to synthesizers, modular synth, professional audio technologies, and vintage instruments – returns for its 14th edition. From July 4 to 6, 2025, the Sporting Dora in Torino will host an unmissable three-day event with exhibitions, live electronic music performances, and opportunities for industry professionals and enthusiasts to meet.

"After over a decade of success, Soundmit took a pause in 2024," says organizer Francesco Mulassano. "This break allowed us to work on an even richer and more engaging format. The new timing in July is not coincidental: the proximity to the Kappa FuturFestival, one of Europe's most renowned electronic music events, creates an ideal context for Soundmit. The presence of an already targeted audience increases visibility and visitor attendance, while still maintaining our autonomy as an independent and unique event."

Situated just 100 meters from Kappa FuturFestival, Sporting Dora is located in one of the most vibrant areas for festival-goers, offering Soundmit's exhibitors exclusive access to an audience already passionate about electronic music and audio technologies. For exhibitors, this strategic location represents a valuable opportunity to reach new contacts, expand their network, and showcase their products in an international and dynamic setting.

Soundmit remains the meeting point for international exhibitors and enthusiasts, offering spaces dedicated to the latest innovations in synthesizers and professional audio technologies, as well as vintage instruments that have shaped the history of music. This edition will also feature live electronic music performances, providing participants with a more immersive and complete experience. Soundmit is a unique opportunity to discover cutting-edge instruments, immerse oneself in the allure of vintage gear, and experience electronic music from every angle. Industry professionals, artists, and curious attendees can engage in an interactive and stimulating environment that has earned Soundmit a central role in the international music community.
